

Andrew Debraggio

Senior Project Coordinator

Andrew Debraggio is the Senior Project Coordinator at the Georgetown University Center on Education and the Workforce. He focuses on consultant hiring, service procurement, and financial management to ensure that projects and reports achieve completion and CEW's strategic objectives. He is also researching youth transitions to adulthood and analyzing the role of career counseling in America.

Prior to joining CEW, Andrew served as a Strategic Communications Officer at the Georgetown University Office of Strategic Communications and Creative Services. He also has previous experience working on Labor/Workforce policy for the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions with Senator Patty Murray (D-WA), the Family-Centered Social Policy Initiative at New America, and in the Office of Senator Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY).

Andrew earned a BA in Government and American Studies from Georgetown University. Andrew also received his Masters in Public Policy from the McCourt School of Public Policy at Georgetown University.
